County Hospital surgeons to hold awards luncheon Posted: Friday, October 5, 2002 By DeAndra McBride A celebration of excellence will be held at the Palmer Hospital for Children on Wednesday, Oct. 9. The event is to recognize the achievements of the surgeons at the hospital. "We had a surgeons' awards banquet last spring and we decided we'd like to do something a little more specialized to recognize what we do best in surgery - hands on," said Ronald Richards, chief of surgery. "We feel the surgeons are the primary care team, providing quality patient care in a highly variable and complex environment, and we would like to recognize them for what they do well." Dr. Richards said the idea is to give the recognition for surgeons' efforts in teaching residents and medical students as well as for the surgeons' continued efforts to improve the quality of their services. Dr. Gary Hockin, medical director of the surgery department, will present awards to the three surgeons on the floor. The surgeons must have completed fellowship training in pediatric surgery, be board-certified or have significant in-training experience, and have been working at Palmer Hospital for at least one year. Dr. Hockin said it's important for the surgeon's staff to encourage them and support them when they have trouble with surgery. "In surgery there is an interesting phenomena of surgeons taking on the role of patients sometimes. To give that recognition, you need to have the patient's support," he said. "We do something right here in surgery, and it may not make it in your first piece of research." Another award will be given for excellence in teaching, honor the surgeon who has the most residents, residents and medical students in training attending and resident seminars in the last year. Dr. Hockin said the surgeons who receive the awards will have the opportunity to give their fellow surgeons

Changing the sensitivity did not work for me so I fixed it like this: Game > Options > Controls > gamepad > Joystick / Mouse. I have set the mouse sensitivity to "Max" since my mouse movement wasn't that good. Don't forget to put the gamepad back in the other side of the list. This should fix your problem. A: It's fixed! Do you have the following on your keyboard shortcuts in your "Keyboard/Mouse and Touchscreen Settings": [F1]Run/Pause (Control): toggles running/pausing the game. [F2]Run/Pause (Toggle): toggles running/pausing the game. [F3]Next map (Control): toggles the next map. [F4]Next map (Toggle): toggles the next map. I think the [Toggle] hotkey had something to do with it as well. You can toggle these by holding them down and pressing another key. The present invention relates to desiccation stress in foodstuffs. Numerous foodstuffs, in particular vegetables, fruits and cereals, are dried in the course of production processes, and lose water, before being packed. Depending on the quantity of water that remains in the foodstuff, the product may then become dehydrated in the course of the packaging. This can lead to loss of flavor, increase in the gas content, and damage to the integrity of the foodstuff. Once the foodstuff has been packaged, storage and transport are lengthy processes, as a result of which the foodstuff is susceptible to microbial contamination. Loss of flavor has been compensated for in a large number of cases with the addition of dried flavor carriers. In other cases, use has been made of artificial sweeteners. Furthermore, there are methods which enable the production of foodstuffs that remain moist or wet despite a high degree of dehydration and/or cooling, for example, by freeze drying, vacuum drying, silica gel drying, and lyophilization. However, these methods are very expensive and are only suitable for special foodstuffs, i.e., those 570a42141b
