À Open a Command window, and in the Command window, type the following, and hit Enter, and make sure that you are in the location that you want to make changes in. dir /a:D C:\ProgramData\Microsoft\Windows\Time\TimeReg.dat Note: The above command is from my own cmd prompt, which is no different from yours. The following sets the start time zone, and sets the time zone for the computer only. tzutil /settime Z\ Note: The tzutil command is also in your command prompt, so you may not even need the above command. When this is done, you will then be prompted to save the changes that you made, if the command succeeded. Then, close the Command window, and open a new one. Then, type in the following, and make sure that you are in the location that you want to make changes in. reg add HKLM\SYSTEM\ControlSet001\Services\W32Time /f "TIMEZONEBASE" /t REG_DWORD /v TimeZone /d "1" Note: The above command is from my own cmd prompt, which is no different from yours. Again, make sure that you are in the correct location that you want to make changes in, and make sure that you are in the correct registry location. After that, you will be prompted to save the changes that you made, if the command succeeded. Then, close the Command window, and open a new one. Then, type in the following, and make sure that you are in the location that you want to make changes in. reg add HKLM\SYSTEM\ControlSet001\Services\W32Time /f "TIMEZONEBASE" /t REG_DWORD /v TimeZone /d "WinsT" Note: The above command is from my own cmd prompt, which is no different from yours. The above will set the time zone for this computer to the same as the time zone that I had previously set for this computer, which was zone "WinsT". After that, you will be prompted to save the changes that you made, if the command succeeded. Then, close the Command window, and open a new one. Then, type in
